Access: (machine translated)

Take the A-1 past Rome in the direction of Naples. About 145 km after Rome (A-1 / A-24 interchange), leave the A-1 at the Caianello exit and head east on the SS-372. After about 40 km, the SS-372 curves around the small town of Telesse. Here turn off for Cerreto Sannita (11 km) and from there continue to Cusano Mutri (another 9 km), then follow the road to Pietrarója over a bridge for about 3 km until you reach a fork. Follow the small road on the left until you reach the bridge over the Titerno, at the exit of the canyon. Park the lower vehicle here and return to the road to Pietrarója with the other one. The road passes by the village. At the end of the village of Pietraraja, after a quarry, - by a small well - a dirt road leads to the left, in a northerly direction, down to the Titerno, past a fork to the left (1.7 km). Here park the second vehicle (total 7.5 km vehicle offset).

Approach: (machine translated)

From the bridge approach next to or in the streambed to the actual beginning of the canyon.

Tour: (machine translated)

The highest rappel point (of a total of 5 rappels) at the beginning of the descent already has the anchorage in the vertical; you get there from a tree (from which you can also directly rappel completely with 2 x 50 m rope). Despite 37 m real rappel height from the transfer point 45 m rope to the rappel makes sense because of the large pool under the rappel. Only partially narrow, but still attractive lime canyon with water flow; also possible jumps given.

Return: (machine translated)

Out to the right and in 3 min. to the bridge.
