Specialities:
Gear: Ropes: 2x40m
Summary: (machine translated) A rock bar at the head of the Beli Potok valley is pierced by two narrow gorges that can be combined with each other. These gorges are known as Desni (right) and Levi (left) Skocniki. After the confluence, the route continues in a sunny gorge up to a 20m waterfall before the somewhat tedious way back through the streambed.
Hydrology:
Access: (machine translated) From Kranska Gora follow road 201 in the direction of Jesenice. The signposted parking lot is located about 3km after Gozd Martuljek just in front of a former railroad bridge, over which there is now a bike path.
Approach: (machine translated) From the parking lot over the railroad bridge and 2x right onto a forest road that you follow to Beli Potok. In the wide streambed still about 300m up until you meet at a cairn on the clearly trodden access trail on the right slope (where the streambed divides into several arms).\n\nThe trail leads first with several hairpin bends steeply up and then crosses more gently rising the western slopes of the Beli Potok ditch. After about 420m you reach the stream. The entry for the Levi Skocniki is right where the trail meets the stream (wire loop on the right). To get to the entry of the Desni Skocniki, cross 100m horizontally to the right until you reach a spring - the stream that springs from this spring forms the Desni Skocniki. A rocky outcrop on the right edge of the gorge offers a beautiful view of the first waterfall.\n\nTo combine both gorges, the following exit possibilities from the gorge are offered:\n\nAfter the gorge progr. left over a wet slope into a notch, continue laboriously over a streambed to the ascent path (walk carefully to avoid excessive stress on the spring vegetation in the slope).\n\nEventually more pleasant and ecologically safe: After the 9m waterfall of the second narrows, climb right-banked over steep tracks to the eastern canyon rim and there back to the entry (path marked in Amap).

Tour: (machine translated)

Desni Skocniki: After 2m slide it starts with a very impressive 40m rappel (rappel tree left). The 35m high main fall and the following 5m waterfall must be rappelled in one. After a short walking passages and a 4m rappel from a jammed tree trunk, the second high drop follows. Below a clamping block it goes down first 13m, then 25m into an impressive rock dome. Better to rappel both steps from the uppermost belaystation (40m). After several steps in a narrow gorge, the Levi Skocniki starts from the left. After two more slides (the first one can be slid) the gorge opens a bit - the abseil loop for the first small slide is hidden on the back right. This is followed by a two meter jump and an ungood 15m high slide. Normal hook on the right halfway up the slide. Here there is the first possibility on the left for the return ascent from the gorge to make the Levi Skocniki. Otherwise, three rappel/slide points follow in a craggy gorge before there is another possibility for the return ascent on the right bank (climbing tracks after the mouth of the stream from the left). Those who have already had enough follow the stream for another 500m (a few slides) to the last 20m waterfall, the exit of the canyoning tour.

Levi Skocniki: After three waterfalls in shapely low gorge follow four higher waterfalls, each secured with chain anchors. Very impressive mouth in the dark gorge of Desni Skocniki.

The total time indicated refers to the combination Desni Skocniki, resurgence, Levi Skocniki.

Return: (machine translated)

At first a bit tedious block hopping in the streambed. When you reach the first scree brake, you can change to the right onto a path that soon becomes clearer. Follow this path to the forest road (short slides are avoided in the streambed).
