Summary: (machine translated)

Alpine rappel canyon

Hydrology:

Access:

Approach: (machine translated)

At the water pipe, continue along the slope and then descend slightly after a hill, where you can already see the road, which you immediately follow to the right until you reach a cluster of houses.

From the possible parking lot, you can see a large stable above the houses, behind which slight tracks lead uphill. Follow these and keep to the right. There are many forks here. A small mountain pass becomes visible, directly behind it is the entry point.

Tour: (machine translated)

A lot of climbing with many natural anchors (so a 50 ropes makes more sense). Quite pretty at the beginning, less beautiful in between and lots of loose boulders in places. At the exit it gets interesting again.

Return: (machine translated)

You almost rappel onto the vehicle.

Nice individual parts, but also a lot of things you don't want! (machine translated)
