Summary: (machine translated)

Rappel canyon, usually rather low in water, no possible jumps or slides, south facing.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)

We leave the A6/A8 (Bern - Interlaken) at Lake Thun via exit 18 (Lattigen) and drive up the valley of the Simme towards Zweisimmen until we reach the village of Latterbach (about 7 km from the highway exit). There we take the first road to the right (Kreuzgasse) and up to the hamlet of Allmede. There the road describes a right turn and about 300m further we park our car in the next leftward haipin bend at a suitable place (890m altitude). See aerial photos approach in photo gallery.

Approach: (machine translated)

After the left turn we continue on the road. It describes a right turn and we dive into the forest. At the next leftward haipin bend (940m altitude) we take the trail that leaves in a northeasterly direction. After about 400 meters of trail, the path swings half-left into the slope above the canyons. Here we go straight on indistinct tracks and thus reach the stream at 1030m altitude (entry E).

Tour: (machine translated)

First 3 smaller rappel, then a double step with 25m and 32m. Finally, 3 smaller steps follow. If there is deadwood in the abseil channels or at their base, the resulting hazard potential increases disproportionately with increasing water flow.

Return: (machine translated)

After opening the canyon, exit to the right onto the path, descend it to the cross-country ski trail and turn right on it to the car.

Automatisch importiert von Schlucht.ch für Canyon Latterbach, Wasserstand: "niedrig" Verankerungen: "ok, alles vorhanden" Eine regelrechte Spülung wäre toll. Der erste grosse Abseiler ist gefährlich. Grosse lose Steine, diese müssten „Angeseilt“ runtergedonnert werden! Schwemmholz im ganzen Canyon verteilt. (Quelle: <https://schlucht.ch/schluchten-der-schweiz.html?cid=252>)
