Summary: (machine translated)

Rappel canyon in the rainforest with longer walking passages

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)

From the town of Basse-Terre on the western half of the island of the same name, we drive north on the coastal road for 42 km (from Basse-Terre airport) (via the villages of Vieux-Habitants, Bouillante and Pointe-Noire) until we reach the village of Ferry on the Anse (Ferry = beach). We continue north on the N 2 and after about 2 km we turn right onto a small tarred road that leads inland in an easterly direction. The road goes uphill and branches out after about 700 m. To move the vehicles we first take the road leading to the right and reach on this road in eastern direction after about 1200 m a larger parking place for our car for the exit. With the second car back to the junction and here in a sharp angle right uphill. About 2200 m from the junction we come to the highest point of the road (Sommet du Morne Mazeau, 615 m a.s.l.) before it descends again at right angles to the left. Here we see on the left a seismogafic installation, on the right of the road display boards at the beginning of a footpath leaving here. But we have to go back by car about 250 m and then we see a small parking bay on the righthand side. Here we park our vehicle for the access.

Approach: (machine translated)

Almost exactly opposite the parking bay, an inconspicuous path disappears into the forest. We follow it in a roughly southerly direction. It changes direction several times at the beginning, leads at first slightly, later steeply descending down to the stream. On the map the path runs approximately on the green marked border of the national park.

Tour: (machine translated)

6 rappels, in between walking and downclimbing

Return: (machine translated)

At the dam on the iron bridge through the lattice gate out to the right and on the slope to the car.
