to the parking lot.

Approach: (machine translated)

We take the path that leads downhill in a north-westerly direction. We come to a shoulder in the terrain and descend here to the left in the hollow without a path down to the stream. We follow it and come to the entrance at a dilapidated wall arch (see link to the ascent, descent and return route).

Tour: (machine translated)

First downhill over large boulders. The key section starts on the right-hand edge and opens up several variations. 50m further on, the attractive part comes to an exit. We continue walking along the streambed until the Ternèze flows into the Leysse.

Return: (machine translated)

Here we cross to the other bank and take the path that takes us up the Leysse to a larger hiking trail. Turn right here, over the footbridge and up onto the shoulder, where we meet up with our approach path again.
