Résumé: (traduction alternative) Be sure to check the water level before starting the tour; good physical condition and surefootedness required; slippery throughout; double cascade dangerous at high water level; many walking and climbing passages; many rappelling points are in the water stream; some jumps can be made with caution.
Hydrologie:
Accès: (traduction alternative) Coming from Strobel am Wolfgangsee direction. Bad Ischl --> after the tunnel turn right into the Rettenbachtal --> after the bridge at the innkeeper follow the mountain road/gravel road (sign dead end) --> !Do not drive to the exit of the road, but park at a large street alcove on the left (here branches off a small forest road on the right)
Approche: (traduction alternative) From the parking lot, follow the forest road down--> before the bridge, the water level can be read at the wooden measuring station house--> after the bridge, always along the steep forest road--> past the excavator crash memorial plaque --> to the clearing (level) --> here still before the raised stand right into the stream (red small iron bridge at the entry!). Entry also possible directly above the "Doppler".
Tour: (traduction alternative) After the bridge there is the first slide, which can be downclimbed and jumped --> after a short walking passages there is a 12m long slide. rappel into the 'Dome' --> after the 'Dome' follows a longer walking passage --> in the upper part of the canyon is the well known double cascade (ca. 2x15m rappel with deep pools) which can be very dangerous at high water levels --> at the double cascade there are enough pitons to build up a ropeway system (for jumping pros the second 15m rappel would be jumpable after checking the depth) --> after this point there are several slippery walking/climbing passages and smaller rappel steps in the middle of the gorge --> ideally there are also several jumping points (mostly very slippery) --> the middle and final part take the most time because of the varied places, strength and concentration --> at the end of the canyons to the confluence with the Rettenbach --> get off here. The tour is now well drilled so that you can find several possibilities in many places.
Retour: (traduction alternative) At the point where you meet the Rettenbach, it is best to walk upstream along the bank for about 20 m and then cross the Rettenbach. On the opposite side you will find an initially inconspicuous path that leads in a few minutes to the forest road. When you reach the forest road, walk back about 100m to the right until you reach the parking lot.

Stands Ok, lots of pushing in the first part of the canyon. (traduction alternative) walked on from above, all stands ok (traduction alternative)

Used the "nicer" day between rainy days to try the Grabenbach again with more water. Equipped with good knowledge of the canyon, floating anchors etc. it was challenging but also a lot of fun. (traduction alternative)

The Grabenbach presented itself today in very nice condition; although rather little water, this for it clear and the pools well flushed that you can jump almost everywhere (where you want). Almost not at all slippery it made a lot of fun (only towards the end it would be more and more slippery). Actually we wanted to get in at the Doppler, but we got lost on the approach and then we were already up at the small inconspicuous bridge. Especially the upper part was as good as not slippery and made (surprisingly) a lot of fun. Well set up , partly with fixed ropes. (traduction alternative)

Most stands OK, partly the glue is somewhat broken out at the glue hooks. The pools are well washed out, many jumps possible! (traduction alternative)
