Matériel: Cordes: 2x40m
Résumé: (traduction alternative) short but impressive canyon with a 30m rappel (divisible) at the end, also suitable for beginners or exercises. Canyon can also be walked from below, cold water, some slippery spots, deep pools (tip:40m ropes), very well equipped (Inox chain anchors).
Hydrologie:
Accès: (traduction alternative) Coming from Liezen drive in the direction of Gröbming, turn right off the main road at Tipschern and drive up the serpentine to the barrier in front of the Salzastausee, park there.
Approche: (traduction alternative) The entry is directly under the dam. Behind the barrier, follow the road until just before the reservoir, then turn right, pass the first iron gate, which is on the left, and climb past the lower second iron gate on the right. Then descend the paths into the canyon. . \n\nThe problem is that this access is explicitly forbidden by the power plant operator. As an alternative, one can climb under the guard rail in a left turn a little before the dam wall and descend via a very steep but well trodden path. You reach the canyon between two concrete steps. Either rappel to the right or downclimb via a ladder.\n-- Main.OliverZerl - 19 Nov 2011
Tour: (traduction alternative) In the upper part is first a 4.5m jump. Then a 6m or 9m jump (depending on the jumping point) which can also be rappelled, belaystation (11/2011) is available. The water depth at this jump is borderline. The exit is a 30m waterfall, belaystation (11/2011) is available. It is also possible to rappel to a belaystation (11/2011) at a height of about 12m, seen from above to the right of the waterfall, and jump from there.\n\nIn summer, on weekends and holidays, there are often several (guided) tours in the canyon at the same time and you have to expect waiting times at the rappel points \n-- Main.OliverZerl - 19 Nov 2011
Retour: (traduction alternative) After the waterfall, follow the path on the left side of the stream. Cross the stream over a wooden bridge and after the power station, cross the works canal and follow the forest road to a leftward hairpin bend. At the hairpin bend turn right onto a clear path that leads back to the parking lot (always along the ridge).
