Résumé: (traduction alternative) The Garganta de Escuain is a huge canyon that collects water from a whole series of side canyons (e.g. Angones, Consusa, Trasito, just to name a few). Unfortunately, most of these side streams are not open for canyoning because they are located in the (Ordesa) National Park. In the canyon there is also a small rappel canyon, the Escuain inferior, but the highlight is the whole great canyon, which is well developed with hiking trails. In the canyon there is also a strong karst spring breaking out of the mountain. It is located at the exit of one of the passage caves with the largest height difference. I have already tried once, together with the Chiemgau cave bears for the necessary permission - no chance. For children, this canyon is a wonderland set up by nature, which will inspire them again and again.
Hydrologie:
Accès: (traduction alternative) We head north on the A-138 from Ainsa towards Bielsa. We pass through Labuerda and Escalona to reach the bridge over the Rio Yaga, where the Miraval canyon ends - 17 km from Ainsa, town center. We pass the hamlet of Hospital and 450 m after the bridge over the Rio Yaga we turn left uphill at an acute angle towards Tella, Revilla. We drive steadily uphill, leaving the turnoff to Tella on the right after 5.7 km. We continue towards Revilla and after another 4.9 km we come to a sharp right turn, at the left edge of which there is a large open space where we can park our car. From here it would be another 0.9 km to Revilla.
Approche: (traduction alternative) From the parking lot, a path leads downhill, especially at the beginning, in the direction of Escuain and Garganta de Escuain. We cross the stream of the Trasito (below a beautiful waterfall for rappel), cross the Consusa at its exit below an also very beautiful waterfall and then watch out for a fork where the path leads left down into the streambed of the Escuain and beyond up to the houses of Escuain. However, we turn right here and walk first high above the riverbed of the Rio Yaga first in a northerly direction.

Tour: (traduction alternative)

Now we are already in our hiking canyon. The path is repeatedly interrupted by small climbs (not difficult). Then we come to the exit of the part where you can make a short rappel canyon from the top (own description) and bypass this part on the northeastern slope in the coppice. We come back to the river bottom - to the left would be downstream to said rappel canyon, but we keep going upstream. We pass an interesting boulder accumulation with waterfall, pass the mouth of the Bco. Angones (see own description) and finally reach the place where the strong karst spring breaks out of the mountain on the upper right, orographic left. Here one can easily climb up and penetrate through the wide mouth of the cave into the interior of the mountain, until the darkness and the roar of the water cause the fearful among us to turn back again. One could go further upstream the Rio Yaga, would then meet a path going from the hamlet of Revilla across the streambed and could take it to the right back to the car. Alternatively, we go back the way we came and a few meters after the wall in the streambed destroyed by the water, we come to the waterfall with the unique pool below. Here you could rappel in several ways, but the highlight is a jump of about 13 m height. If you don't want to do both, you can go back along the approach path and meet the "jumpers" where the path from the village of Escuain comes down from the right. The jump can be repeated at will by walking downstream and then following the tracks to the left up to the path. In summer, the large pool and other pools of the Yaga River are crowded with bathers. A beautiful place.

Retour: (traduction alternative)

We go downstream from the pool for about 100 m to the place where the path coming down from the hamlet of Escuain crosses the river. We take this path to the left and come back up to the car on our access path.
